Human Nature and Conduct

Part 1, The Place of Habit in Conduct

by John Dewey

John Dewey, an early 20th Century American philosopher, psychologist, educational theorist saw Social Psychology as much a physical science (with rules and predictive power) as Biology and Chemistry. This project encompasses Part 1 of his 4 part book, Human Nature and Conduct.

Dewey's uses the word "HABIT" as a specialized catch-all word to describe how a person and his/her objective environment interact. This interaction is the basis for moral judgement. Dewey writes: "All habits are demands for certain kinds of activity; and they constitute the self." In other places he also asserts that "Habits are Will." ~ Summary by William Jones, Soloist
